

Frequently asked questions

Q. Lots of charities ask me for a gift in my Will. Why should I choose Children's Cancer Institute?

A. Choosing to leave a legacy to a charity is a very personal decision. When you leave a legacy to Children's Cancer Institute, you will make a lasting contribution to medical research that is focused on saving the lives and the futures of children who are affected by cancer. This disease is merciless – it takes that most precious of all gifts away – the chance at a childhood. We are making remarkable progress and your gift will, without a doubt, help us find cures.

Q. How will children with cancer benefit from my legacy?

A. Children with cancer and their families need answers. With your help, we will be able to push the frontiers of medical research further and give children with deadly cancers, like DIPG, real hope. We will be able to continue to conduct our lifesaving Minimal Residual Disease test which reduces the impact of treatment on young patients. We will also build on our Zero Childhood Cancer Program so that it becomes standard of care for all children diagnosed with cancer. Your gift will keep on giving, every day, in the lives of the children you will be saving, and in their children too.

Q. I don't have much to give, will a small amount help?

A. We are so grateful for every gift we receive, as it takes us even closer to curing cancer and reducing suffering. It's important that your loved ones come first, but every gift will make an impact to the 1000 children who are diagnosed every year in Australia with cancer.
